

Riveting Stories of English Women Aiding the French Resistance

Charlotte Gray by Sebastian Faulks

In 1942, Charlotte Gray goes to Occupied France on a dual mission: to run an apparently simple errand for a British special operations group and to search for her lover, an English airman who has gone missing in action.

Jackdaws by Ken Follett

Flick Clairet, a young British secret agent, proposes a daring plan to attack a chateau vital to German communications; she will parachute into France with an all-woman team known as the 'Jackdaws' and they will penetrate the chateau in disguise.

Trapeze by Simon Mawer

Marian is recruited by the "Inter-Services Research Bureau" and enrolled in a rigorous, take-no-prisoners espionage training course to aid the French resistance. Or at least that's what Marian thinks at first.

The Lavender Garden by Lucinda Riley

A bright, young British office clerk, Constance Carruthers, is sent undercover to Paris. Separated from her contacts in the Resistance, she soon stumbles into the heart of a prominent family who regularly entertain elite members of the German military even as they plot to liberate France.

Code Name Verity by Elizabeth Wein

Oct. 11th, 1943—A British spy plane crashes in Nazi-occupied France. Its pilot and passenger are best friends. One of the girls has a chance at survival. The other has lost the game before it's barely begun.
