School Board adopts FY2024 budget

The School Board adopted the School Department's fiscal year 2024 budget at its meeting Monday.

In a 5-2 vote, the board approved a bottom-line budget of $85,141,068, a 1.2% increase from the current FY2023 budget. The budget calls for $52,971,017 to be raised by local property tax, exceeding the estimated tax cap calculation by $1,125,663. The tax-supported operating budget, including debt service and revenue from the statewide education tax of $7,120,667, increased by 6.26% to $78,874,163. School Board Chair Carolyn Mebert and School Board member Michelle Clancy were the two dissenting votes.

The budget will be included in the City Manager's city-wide budget that will be presented to the City Council next month. A public hearing on the school portion of the budget will be held during the Council's budget deliberations in March.

Superintendent William Harbron and Business Administrator Michael Limanni said the budget includes a cost-neutral staffing plan to address lower enrollments at the elementary and middle school levels while expanding educational opportunities for high school and career technical center students. The staffing plan also includes providing student and staffing support services at all three levels.

The adopted budget would add team leader stipends for the elementary schools to bridge the gap in the school improvement plan, helping to ensure that decisions on teams align with the district's and school's mission, vision, and strategic plan, Harbron said. The middle school would add an instructional coach to provide instructional professional development directly to the classroom to help predict and get ahead of issues and introduce new and supportive instructional materials. The high school adds a social studies teacher and brings the sports medicine and building trades instructors to full-time to address waiting lists in both growing programs.

The budget would also add an additional school psychologist, two special education teachers, three social workers, and a floating English to speakers of other languages (ESOL) paraeducator to provide students with additional supports.

Some of the cost items driving the budget increase include health insurance premiums, expected to increase by 14.3%; special education costs, estimated to rise by 21.27%, with an estimated $2,216,742 in non-wage obligations.

Limanni said he will continue refining the budget as more definitive numbers become available in the coming weeks. The School Department is also negotiating contracts with four of its unions and expects additional budget discussions and revisions.

Documents detailing the FY2024 budget summary and significant cost items are posted to the FY2024 Budget Revealed webpage, along with other budget documents and videos of budget meetings and workshops.

The School Board plans to continue its School Board its budget discussions at upcoming workshops to help further refine its budget.

Electric aggregation plan for Dover before City Council at next meeting

The City Council will consider approving the Electric Aggregation Plan (EAP) at its meeting this Wednesday, Jan. 25. Adopting EAP is the first significant step in creating a Dover Community Power Program. If approved, the plan would then be submitted to the Public Utilities Commission for review, among other steps.

The EAP would serve as the Dover Community Power program's operation blueprint. The Energy Commission, which Dover's City Council designated as the city's Electric Aggregation Committee (EAC) for the program, held public hearings on the plan on Nov. 16, 2022, and Dec. 14, 2022. At the Energy Commission's Jan. 18, 2023 meeting, it unanimously approved the EAP and recommended its adoption by the City Council. For details on the EAP and

The Community Power program is authorized under state law RSA 53:E. It allows municipalities and counties to aggregate retail electric customers to “access to competitive markets for supplies of electricity and related energy services” on a voluntary basis. The program would only launch if it can initially offer residential default electricity rates lower than those provided by Eversource; it would be self-funded through revenue generated by participating customers and not use taxpayer funds to cover program expenses.

Once operational, as envisioned under the current draft plan, residents and businesses utilizing the default electricity supply through Eversource would be enrolled in the Dover Community Power program. Default customers would receive a notice well before the potential launch date that they will be enrolled in the program and can opt out or choose another supplier before its launch. The program is voluntary; customers can return to the default electricity supply or choose another competitive supplier. Customers with competitive suppliers can opt into the program – they would not be automatically enrolled. The estimated launch date could be around the start of 2024, depending on the approval process and market conditions.

The Dover Community Power program is part of the non-profit Community Power Coalition of New Hampshire (CPCNH) initiative, of which the City of Dover is a founding member. CPCNH is overseen by a board of directors appointed from participating communities. The goal is for the participating communities to use their combined purchasing power to create savings and new value for customers, including expanded product options with higher mixes of renewable energy.

Other resolutions related to Dover Community Power are also on the agenda. One would change Dover’s voting member on the CPCNH board of directors to the city’s Resilience Manager, currently Jackson Kaspari; the voting alternate would be the chair of the Energy Commission, currently William Baber. The other resolution would approve an amendment to the Joint Powers Agreement (JPA), which the City Council authorized as part of participating in CPCNH. The amendment would enable members to vote on changes to the JPA at any board meeting instead of once a year; the amendment also provides notice requirements for members for any proposed changes.

Readoption of the Veterans’ Tax Credit and Veterans’ Property Tax Credit

The Council will consider a resolution to readopt the Veterans’ Tax Credit and the Veterans’ Property Tax Credit. The state legislature passed a bill that would expand eligibility to include those on active duty in the armed forces, including those in active duty or reserves for the National Guard. The Department of Revenue Administration informed the city that it needs to readopt the credit for veterans to be eligible for the $750 credit the City Council had previously adopted. Currently, 998 veterans received the $750 tax credit; however, the city is unclear how many more would be eligible. It estimates the new eligibility may result in 75 additional tax credits to a total of $56,250; the city estimates the tax rate impact would be 1 cent per $1,000 assessed valuation.

Public hearings

There are two public hearings on the Council’s agenda. One would be on the resolution to accept and expend a $56,354 Assistance to Firefighters Grant funded by the Federal Emergency Management Agency (FEMA). Accepting the grant requires a city match of 10%. The Fire Department plans to use the grant enhance its health and wellness program by purchasing new exercise equipment for each fire station and providing each employee with an individualized training program.

The second public hearing is on a resolution authorizing the City of Dover to conduct its annual appraisal of real estate for FY2024 (Tax Year 2023). The city has conducted the annual assessment since 1998 to follow market trends to ensure proportionality so that assessments remain between 90% and 110% of market value, and to avoid extraordinary changes in assessments and resulting tax bills, according to the resolution. This will be the first of two public hearings on the resolution. The second one is scheduled for the Council’s Feb. 22 meeting; a vote would occur at its March 8 meeting.

The meeting begins at 7 p.m. in City Hall’s Council Chambers. The meeting will be televised on

Downtown Pedestrian and Vehicle Improvements Project topic of Jan. 23 presentation

The Transportation Advisory Commission will meet on Monday, Jan. 23, for a public presentation Downtown Pedestrian and Vehicular Access Improvements Project. This project will bring the 2015 Downtown Pedestrian and Vehicular Access and Streetscape Study into design and ultimately create construction plans.

Staff from the city's Planning and Engineering divisions and design consultant Greenman-Pederson, Inc., will provide a brief presentation at the meeting. Their overview will discuss current conditions in the Central Business District, the recommendation from the 2015 study to change the traffic flow on Central Avenue and Main Street, and why that change would be advantageous to pedestrians, motorists and downtown businesses.

After the presentation, the public will be invited to review representations of the proposed design at different stations. Each station, operated by a member of the project team, will include plans, alternative designs, streetscape renderings, and a list of the pros and cons. There will be sticky notes and pens available so the public can comment and/or directly mark areas of concern. The project team will also be available to answer questions, address concerns and solicit feedback.

Further public meetings are planned during the design phase of the project. The city will also provide email updates as the project develops. To sign up for these emails, visit <https://bit.ly/dovernewsletters> and add "Project update: Downtown Pedestrian and Vehicular Access Improvements" to your current email subscription list.

Action plan for Community Development Block Grant Program has public hearing Jan. 24

The Planning Board will be conducting a public hearing regarding the draft FY24 Community Development Block Grant (CDBG) Annual Action Plan. The public hearing will take place on Tuesday, Jan. 24, at 7 p.m. in the Council Chambers at City Hall.

The City of Dover receives federal grant funding through the CDBG program, which is administered through the U.S. Department of Housing and Urban Development (HUD). The City has adopted a Consolidated Plan that identifies Impediments to Fair Housing Choice and the Community's priority objectives to be addressed during the FY21-25 timeframe. To help achieve the priorities identified in the Consolidated Plan, the City must develop an Annual Action Plan which outlines the City's proposed use of grant funding received through the CDBG program for FY24.

When completed, the final FY24 Annual Action Plan provides the allocations that will be made to organizations, programs and projects. Projects under consideration for the Dover FY24 Annual Action Plan include:

- Homeless shelter services
- Security deposit programs
- Weatherization and energy efficiency improvements
- Economic development activities

Members of the Public, Organizations, Agencies and Programs are encouraged to attend/participate and provide comments regarding the draft FY24 Annual Action Plan. Comments and concerns can also be submitted to Community Development Planner Dave Carpenter via e-mail at d.carpenter@dover.nh.gov; via telephone at 603-516-6008; or via postal mail at Planning and Community Development Department, 288 Central Ave, Dover, NH 03820.

Composting: How you can get started

Composting is a natural way to recycle nutrients back into the soil and reduce waste going to landfills. It can be made from yard waste such as leaves and grass clippings, and kitchen scraps such as egg shells, coffee grounds and fruit and vegetable peels and scraps.

In the backyard

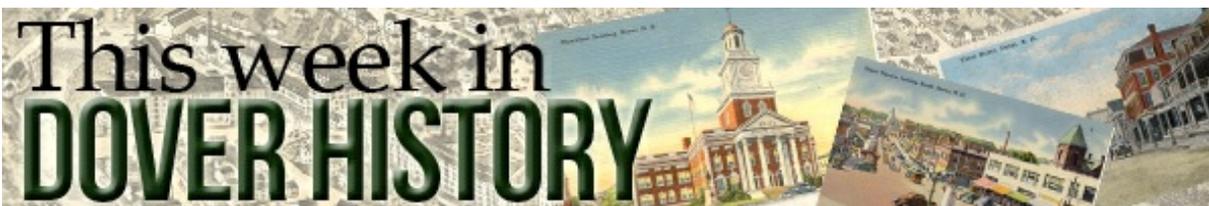

Backyard composting can be done in a mound or a garbage can. If using a garbage can, drill holes 4 to 6 inches apart, and put 2 to 3 inches of straw or wood chips in the bottom for drainage. A shovel or pitchfork may also be needed.

Bring it to the Recycling Center

The City of Dover has partnered with Mr. Fox Composting to provide residents with a no-cost composting option to divert food waste from the solid waste stream. Five 64-gallon composting totes are located at the Recycling Center, which is open Tuesday, Thursday, and Saturday from 8:30 a.m. to 3:30 p.m.

The bins accept all food scraps, including meat, bones, eggshells, bread, seafood, fruits, vegetables, pizza boxes, coffee grounds, wooden stirrers, sugar packets, napkins, towels, teabags, ground tea, muffin wrappers, flowers, floral trimmings, and corks.

Jan. 27, 1882 — (From the New York Times) "Dover, NH - The small-pox scare is still at its height. It has been discovered that two persons who had visited Mr. Tibbett's bedside previous to his death are now sick with varioloid of a mild type. The Secretary of the State Board of Health consulted with the local Board of Health, the City Physician, and other authorities yesterday, and the result is that no more public performances, balls, gatherings, etc., are to be permitted, at least for the present, within the city limits. An order has been issued by the agent of the Cocheco Manufacturing Company authorizing two surgeons to vaccinate all the operatives employed in the mill who are willing to submit to the operation. Last summer in two weeks nearly 8,000 persons were vaccinated at the city's expense. The County Commissioners have ordered the attending physicians at the county farm to vaccinate the inmates.

Jan. 26, 1907 — At 6:30 p.m. on Jan. 26, fire broke out on the fourth floor of Cocheco Mill Number 1. The sprinkler system was under repair so the fire spread rapidly. Power was shut off, leaving panicked workers attempting to escape in darkness and smoke. The building had only one fire escape, many workers were injured when they leaped from windows. Firefighters batted the flames for 36 hours. Their efforts were hampered by 30-degree temperatures. It was so cold that water from the fire engines froze almost immediately. Some of the fire hoses were accidentally cut by the buggy wheels of sightseers. Thousands of spectators from Portsmouth, Rochester, Rollinsford, Durham and Newmarket came to watch. Police had to send all officers to control the crowds, many of whom came from Dover's 60 bars. The police station filled to capacity with intoxicated spectators. In the end, four lives were lost and the building was a million dollar loss. Just a few days before the fire, the Mutual Insurance Company proclaimed the Cocheco Mills "excellent". (Dover Public Library)

As the blaze raged on, an unknown prisoner at the former jail perched on the hill above, wrote this poem:

Twas on a January morn

*And work had taken regular form.
The factory bells had rung their final call.
When the cry of fire quite shrill
Rang through No.1 Cocheco mill,
The beginning of what proved a terrible pall.*

*Quick the cry was passed along
Through that terror stricken throng;
No pen, what followed after, can describe.
Fighting wildfire, shrieking childlike,
vainly trying to escape
In that frantic, groaning, seething, human tide.*

*Firemen grieving and struggling bravely,
People running, rushing madly,
Hear the shrieks amid that chaos of despair.
Some are helping, toiling blindly,
Others soothing in tones kindly,
Oh, God, tis more than human eyes can bear.*

*What a sense of sickly terror,
Heart strings broke in silent horror,
A melancholy spell hands in the air.
See the flares keep leaping higher,
Dancing around that funeral pyre,
Leaving nothing but the brick walls grim and bare.*

*Then a wild yell, long and loud,
Issues from that surging crowd;
Women swooned away, and strong men's courage failed.
See a wild-eyed, pale-faced lad,
Begging, pleading, almost mad,
To be taken from that roaring seething hell.*

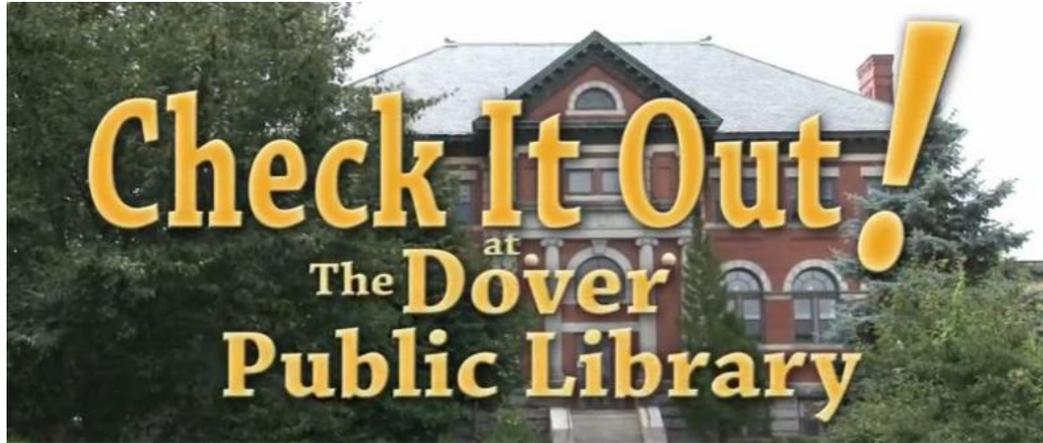

*Soon a ladder is extended
Through smoke, flame, and water, blended
Into color that defies the painters art.
He is saved, but many more
Lie upon that upper floor,
And the gaping crowd falls backward sick at heart.*

*There's no time for idle theory,
How to reach them is the quarry,
But the firemen see the folly of such pains.
For, although they may be living,
That no other power, save Heaven,
Can save them from that cruel heartless flames.*

*Women shrieking, wildly sobbing,
Black despair their senses robbing,*

*Calling, calling for their loved ones but in vain.
For their spirits have departed
Leaving friends here heartbroken
Full of death-dividing anguish, grief and pain.*

Jan. 29, 2002 — Demolition of the former public works facilities on River Street began this day. The demolition included a controlled burning of the old city barn by Dover Fire and Rescue. Community Services had moved into a new facility on Mast Road the previous year, in 2001. The demolition of the former public works building was intended to make way for the development of the waterfront, which is underway. At the time, then City Councilor Parks Christenbury said, "Every council has its milestone. This is the 2002 City Council's milestone." Dover's mayor at the time, Alex Nossiff, added, "We're hoping to attract people to a resource that has been neglected for years and years. This is a monumental step."

New Dover400 book compiles, expands popular 'Heritage Walks'

Dover400, the committee organizing Dover's 400th Anniversary celebrations, recently announced the publication of a new book, "Dover Heritage Walks: A Compendium of Past Walks and Reveals." This 175-page volume, which covers over 250 Dover historical properties and sites, relates the history of hundreds of buildings, people, churches, and businesses in the Garrison City.

The idea for the book arose from an existing series of 29 "Heritage Walk" brochures which were produced annually from 1979 to 2007. In each of those years, a different Dover neighborhood was chosen, and significant research into its history was conducted. Volunteers then led walking tours of that neighborhood. But with such valuable information scattered among so many separate pamphlets, it was difficult to navigate the history.

With the publication of this new compilation volume, Dover's history comes alive. The original brochure information has been edited and updated, and new color photos now illustrate each property. Designed with a spiral binding, the book can easily be carried on an exploratory walk or read comfortably in an armchair. The book includes a table of contents, organized by street address, and an index with surnames and/or business names. The new volume sells for $30 and is available at the Dover Chamber of Commerce, the City Clerk's Office at Dover City Hall, and at the Dover Public Library. All proceeds will help support the Dover400 Celebration events from June 24 to July 4, 2023.

Dover400 is also conducting two fundraising campaigns, "$400 for 400", an effort to solicit 400 donors at $400, and also "The 1623 Society," with membership available for a donation of $1623. Donations may be sent to Dover400, 24 Chestnut St., Dover, NH 03820.
