Planning Board endorses Community Trail Phase IV design

Trail would cross Bellamy River and connect to Knox Marsh Road

The Planning Board endorsed a design option for the next phase of the Community Trail that would wind through Bellamy Park and terminate near Knox Marsh Road.

The city contracted with the engineering firm Fuss & O'Neill to design what's known as Phase IV of the Community Trail. At the Planning Board's July 23 meeting, project engineers

8:30 a.m. to 3:30 p.m.

presented two design alternatives: one that used the current bridge over the Bellamy River into Bellamy Park and a second one that would begin next to the high school fields and cross the river further back in the park.

The option using the current bridge would go through the Bellamy Park Disc Golf Course, creating safety concerns for trail users, the engineers said. In addition, there would be more wetlands impact, and the original bridge is not fully handicap accessible, they said. One drawback of the second option is that it would be more expensive to build a new bridge. The pros, they said, are that the trail would connect directly to the Dover High School, and it would provide parking at its Knox Marsh Road terminus. After the presentation, the Planning Board endorsed the second trail option that would create the new bridge crossing over the Bellamy.

The city has been using federal grant money administered through the NH Department of Transportation to fund the design and construction of the Community Trail. The grants have provided 80% of the cost, with the city providing a 20% match. Additional grant funding will be needed to fund the second trail option. Once funded, the engineers estimate it will take two to three years to create final design documents and get the necessary permits and rights-of-way for the project. They estimate the actual construction to take one construction season to complete.

City reminds residents of efficient water use practices amid summer heat

As summer temperatures rise, the City of Dover is reminding water system customers about efficient water use practices. While the city's water supply remains ample and fully capable of meeting increased summer demand, officials are promoting mindful consumption of this valuable resource.

Recent data shows daily water use has increased to as much as 3 million gallons during peak summer days. Average daily use, excluding the summer months, is about 1.8 million gallons, according to Community Services Director John Storer.

The city's robust water system, bolstered by the recently commissioned Pudding Hill Water Treatment Plant, which can provide up to 40% of the city's daily water needs, is well-equipped to handle the surge in usage.

"Our water system is strong and fully capable of meeting the current demand," said City Manager J. Michael Joyal, Jr. "As we see usage increase during these warm summer months, it's a good time to remind ourselves about efficient water use practices. By being mindful of our water habits, we can ensure the long-term sustainability of this precious resource for our community."

The city offers the following suggestions for water use:

- Consider watering lawns and gardens early in the morning or late in the evening to minimize evaporation
- When cleaning outdoor areas, a broom can be just as effective as a hose for many tasks
- Promptly repairing leaky faucets and toilets can prevent unnecessary water loss
- Water-efficient showerheads and faucet aerators can reduce water use without compromising performance
- Running full loads in dishwashers and washing machines maximizes water efficiency
- Collecting rainwater for outdoor plant watering can be an eco-friendly alternative
- Be mindful of lawn watering; most lawns need only 1 inch of water per week
- Consider using a car wash that recycles water for vehicle cleaning

These practices can help maintain efficient water use without significantly impacting daily activities.

Residents and businesses connected to the city's public drinking water system can monitor daily water usage and receive alerts of potential water leaks with the city's Eye on Water service.

To sign-up, visit <https://eyeonwater.com/signup>. Customers will need their water service account number, which is printed on the water bill.

The service provides customers direct access to their water consumption data and provides tools to help manage water use, updating usage four times daily. The tools allow consumers to view their daily, weekly, monthly, and yearly usage activity and provide a better understanding of how they use water. The app allows customers to set text/email alerts based on water usage to help detect leaks in the system quickly.

The city will continue to monitor water usage patterns and provide updates as needed. Residents interested in learning more about water usage and efficiency can find information through the city's official website and social media channels. Additional water conservation tips and resources are available on the New Hampshire Department of Environmental Resources website.

For more information on efficient water use or the city's water supply, please contact the Community Services Department at 603-516-6450.

July 31, 1766 — The Rev. Jeremy Belknap received an invitation to preach as an assistant in Dover. After a month-long trial period, the parish unanimously agreed to offer him an annual salary of 100 pounds. They also presented him with a choice: either a one-time payment of 150 pounds, to be paid in three installments over nine months following his ordination, or the provision of a house, barn, and garden for his use during his ministry. Belknap opted for the 150 pounds.

Later, Belknap purchased a house on Silver Street from Charles Clapham, which became his home throughout his time as minister in Dover. This house stood on the site where the Belknap School was eventually built in 1854. The property originally included the neighboring lot, where Dr. Ezra Green constructed a house around 1776. Dr. Green resided there until his death in 1847, and the property remained in his family's possession until 1876.

Jeremy Belknap, born in 1744, was a prominent American clergyman and historian who left an indelible mark on New Hampshire's history. He is renowned for authoring "The History of New Hampshire," a three-volume work published between 1784 and 1792, which is considered one of the earliest comprehensive state histories in America. Belknap's influence extended far beyond his role as a minister in Dover, where he served from 1767 to 1786. His historical writings provided invaluable insights into New Hampshire's early development, cementing his status as a key figure in the state's intellectual landscape. In 1791, Belknap founded the Massachusetts Historical Society, an act that inspired the establishment of similar institutions across other states.

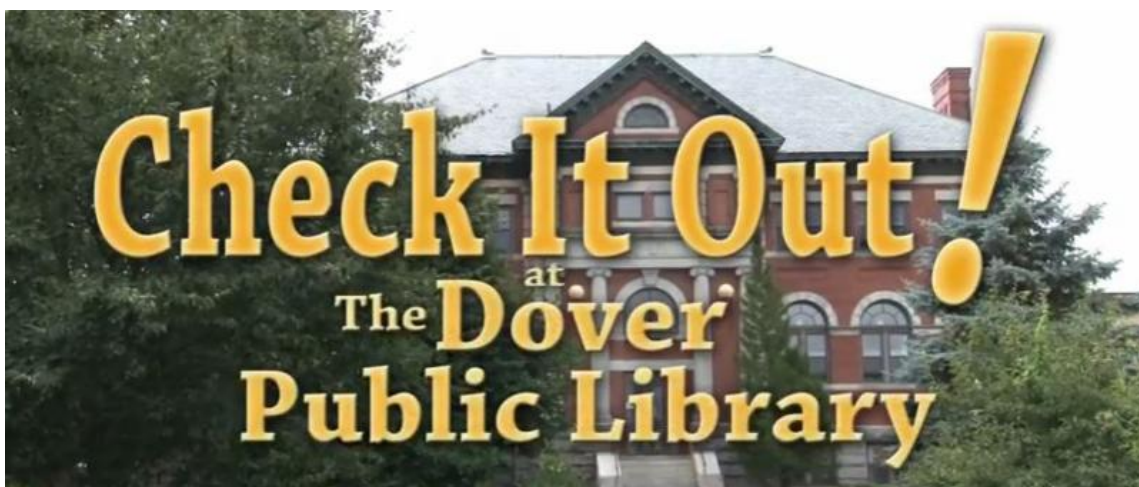

Beyond his contributions to history and religion, Belknap was also known for his progressive views. He advocated for the abolition of slavery and supported the American Revolution, positioning himself at the forefront of the social and political movements of his time.

Aug. 3, 1829 — James G. Avery, a young worker at the Cocheco Manufacturing Co., died after falling 40 feet from the Dry House.

July 31, 1848 — Alfred I. Sawyer, founder of the Sawyer Woolen Mills, died on this day at age 49.

July 30, 1998 — In a thrilling Goodwill Games dual meet, American swimming sensation and Dover's own Jenny Thompson led the U.S. team to victory against the World All-Stars. The Dover native showcased her exceptional endurance and skill, anchoring the crucial 400-meter freestyle relay just minutes after winning the 100-meter butterfly. Despite feeling exhausted and disoriented, Thompson managed to hold off a strong challenge from Martina Moravcova in the final leg, securing a narrow win for the American team. Her phenomenal performance in the butterfly event, clocking the seventh-fastest time in history, set the stage for the dramatic relay finish. The win improved the American women's record to 2-0 in the competition.

New Hampshire Coalition for the Support of Service Dogs

The Greater Dover Chamber of Commerce recently held a ribbon-cutting ceremony to welcome the New Hampshire Coalition for the Support of Service Dogs (NHCSSD).

NHCSSD was established by Brendan Madden in 2018 with the goal of helping service dogs receive the best quality of life possible. Madden received his first service dog in 2005 and quickly learned about the numerous expenses that come with caring for a service dog. Everything from medication and veterinary bills to proper grooming falls to the owner, and these essential costs quickly add up.

In addition to offering financial assistance, NHCSSD also works to increase awareness about the importance of service dogs and the essential tasks and services that they fulfill for their owners. It is the desire to achieve this goal that led to the concept of a statewide coalition of businesses. Each business that NHCSSD works with has a unique voice and audience, meaning that the outreach efforts will only continue to grow over time.

National Night Out will be held at the police station at 46 Chestnut St. from 4 to 7 p.m. and is free to the public. It is a time for community members to meet with police officers, discuss issues, learn what police do, and unite with the common goal of crime prevention and safety.
