Petition before EPA seeks strict regulation of stormwater discharge into Great Bay

The Conservation Law Foundation recently submitted a petition to the U.S. Environmental Protection Agency for the agency to exercise its residual designation authority to regulate stormwater discharges into the Great Bay Estuary. The CLF alleges that non-point stormwater discharges are contributing to the violations of water quality standards in the Great Bay Estuary watershed.

The CLF's petition and statements of fact, filed on Feb. 15, 2023, is available here. By law, the EPA is required to respond to the petition within 90 days. The City of Dover is currently studying the petition and has not taken a position.

The EPA's "residual designation" authority stems from the federal Clean Water Act. It allows the agency to regulate stormwater discharges on a case-by-case basis if it determines the discharges contribute to a violation of water quality standards, is a significant contributor of pollutants to federally protected surface waters, or controls are needed for the discharge based on the waste load allocations that are part of "total maximum daily loads" that address the pollutant(s) of concern.

"Exercising its residual designation authority will allow EPA to regulate currently unregulated discharges of nitrogen that are harming the estuary," the CLF states. "Existing mechanisms, including the Great Bay Total Nitrogen General Permit and New Hampshire Small Municipal Separate Storm Sewer System General Permit, control for some nitrogen in the estuary, but are limited in scope and application and do not address most of the nitrogen affecting the estuary."

Non-point sources would include stormwater runoff from impervious surfaces. CLF, in its statement of facts, states, "the average annual nitrogen loading from impervious surfaces ranges from 10.5 to 17 pounds per acre per year, depending on land use type." Impervious surfaces can also absorb and emit heat and increase the stormwater runoff temperature, thereby "heating the water in the estuary," the CLF states.

If the EPA agrees to exercise its residual designation authority, the regulation is not expected to affect the Great Bay Total Nitrogen General Permit ("GBTNP") the EPA issued in January 2021. The City of Dover agreed to be covered by the permit, which measures point sources of nitrogen, specifically from the city's wastewater treatment plant on Middle Road. With the cities of Portsmouth and Rochester and the towns of Exeter, Rollinsford, and Milton, and in collaboration with CLF, Dover is participating in the development and execution of an adaptive water quality management plan based on science-based protocols to improve the health of Great Bay.

As it has for years, the City of Dover continues to invest in its wastewater infrastructure to improve the water quality discharging from the wastewater treatment plant. In addition to wastewater plant upgrades, the city continues to seek and fix the inflow and infiltration of stormwater into the sanitary sewer system. The city also regularly evaluates and implements innovative best management practices with stormwater to filter and treat stormwater where it occurs. These ongoing efforts have significantly reduced the amount of nitrogen and other pollutants entering Great Bay.

As part of being covered by the GBTNP, the cities of Dover, Portsmouth, and Rochester committed to the CLF through a settlement agreement to improve water quality in Great Bay, specifically through increased investment in stormwater treatment. At the direction of the City Council, city staff is creating a framework for a stormwater utility to generate a stable source of revenue to improve stormwater infrastructure through user fees and incentivize prudent on-premise stormwater management to reduce pollutants entering Great Bay. As currently envisioned, revenue would be collected through user fees based on a property's stormwater management practices that could only be spent on stormwater and flood resilience-related activities. A draft ordinance of a stormwater utility is anticipated later this year.

City Council sees water treatment plant progress

The City Council received a tour of the Pudding Hill Water Treatment Plant under construction off Stonewall Drive on March 9. The city's Environmental Projects Manager, Gretchen Young, led the tour with Director John Storer and Utilities Superintendent Mike Nadeau, and engineers Keith Pruitt, Anna Alegria, and Joel Moulton of Underwood Engineers. They explained the construction process and the three-tier filtration system that will remove PFAS, 1,4 dioxane, MTBE, iron, manganese, and other compounds from the Pudding Hill aquifer. Once online, expected by the summer of 2024, the aquifer will be capable of providing 40% of the city's drinking water needs. The city elected to voluntarily take the aquifer offline three years ago to not further draw contaminants into the aquifer before the treatment plant is completed. The city contracted with Underwood Engineers to design the treatment plant and oversee construction.

Daylight Saving Time a reminder for fire safety and prevention

Daylight Saving Time begins Sunday, March 12, 2023, at 2 a.m. It's a good time to change and test the batteries in smoke alarms and carbon monoxide detectors.

Dover Fire and Rescue reminds residents that one simple step can help save their lives and the lives of those around them. Everyone is encouraged to use Daylight Saving Time as a reminder to change the batteries in smoke alarms and carbon monoxide detectors, test alarms, and remind friends, family, neighbors, and fellow community members to do the same.

"Eighty percent of child fire fatalities occur in homes without working smoke alarms," said Dover Fire Chief Michael McShane. "It's a tragic statistic that could be reduced by ensuring you have an appropriate number of smoke detectors where you live and adopting the simple habit of changing your batteries when you change your clocks. If you have hardwired detectors, replacing the batteries at these intervals helps to ensure they can withstand the duration of a potential power outage at any time during the year."

According to the National Fire Protection Association, 71 percent of smoke alarms that failed to operate had missing, disconnected, or dead batteries. Changing smoke alarm batteries at least twice a year, testing those alarms, and reminding others to do the same are some of the simplest, most effective ways to reduce these tragic deaths and injuries.

"The peak time for home fire fatalities is between 11 p.m. and 7 a.m. when most families are sleeping," McShane said. "Smoke alarm maintenance is a simple, effective way to reduce home fire deaths. Children and senior citizens are most at risk, and a working smoke alarm can give them the extra seconds they need to get out safely."

A working smoke detector doubles your chance of surviving a home fire.

Dover native Ann Darby Reynolds was first woman to receive Purple Heart in Vietnam

Ann Darby Reynolds, a native of Dover, holds the distinction of being the first nurse and woman to receive the Purple Heart in Vietnam. When she received her orders to be stationed in Saigon, Vietnam in 1963, she wasn't sure where Vietnam was. Nevertheless, Reynolds soon became familiar with the city of Saigon, where she was stationed less than a year after receiving her orders. Nurses were exposed to the same dangers as soldiers, and this was evident on Christmas Eve 1964 when the officer station where Reynolds resided was bombed. Despite being injured in the bombing, Reynolds collected herself and immediately started administering aid to her colleagues.

In January 1965, Reynolds and three other nurses received the Purple Heart for their actions that day. Capt. Archie Kuntze, the commanding officer of the headquarters for Naval Support Activity in Vietnam, pinned the medal on Reynolds first and then the three other nurses. He said: "These four will be recorded by historians as the first women members of the United States Armed Forces to receive the Purple Heart in Vietnam. I should also like to make special note of the fact that although wounded in the Brink explosion these women disregarded their own wounds to care for the other casualties both at the scene and later at the station hospital. Their actions in this regard were beyond the call of duty and in keeping with the highest tradition of the United States Navy and the medical profession."

Reynolds left Vietnam in March 1965 and was assigned to the Naval Hospital in Portsmouth. From there, it was off to Navy Nurse Recruiting in Boston. She later served at Navy hospitals in California, Virginia, and Florida. Reynolds finished her 26-year Navy career as director of Nursing Services at Naval Hospital, Camp Lejeune. She retired as a captain in 1988.

Reynolds is a true hero and a source of inspiration to many women who have followed in her footsteps. She currently lives in Exeter.

A rendering of the new water tank that will soon begin construction.

Construction of new water storage tank begins soon

Work to build a new water storage tank on city land near Smith Well Road is expected to begin as early as next week, with the contractor mobilizing equipment to the site.

Initial work will occur via the Webb Place entrance to the project. As the project develops in the coming weeks, work will also occur on Smith Well Road. Smith Well Road work includes installing a 16-inch water main and replacing an aging sanitary sewer pipe. Residents will receive advanced notice when work on Smith Well Road begins.

The project is to build a 110-foot water tower that will hold one million gallons of water, creating storage redundancy and allowing for the rehabilitation of the Garrison Hill water tank. After a competitive bid process, the City Council awarded the bid to Caldwell Tanks, Inc., of Louisville, Kentucky, for $5,611,700 at its April 27, 2022 meeting. Before the project went out to bid, it was by the Technical Review Committee Planning Board and the Planning Board approved its site review plan.

After the new water tank project is online, Community Services plans to rehabilitate the Garrison Hill water storage tank, which stores up to four million gallons.

For more information, contact Community Services at 603-516-6450.

Explore the history of the Dover Quakers

Four-hundred years ago the Puritans were the voice of authority in Dover. Over time a new faith began to gain popularity and the Quakers soon made up a third of the population. But how did their peaceable lifestyle and teachings win over so many despite persecution from the Puritans?

Discover the answer to this question at Dover Public Library on Wednesday, March 22 at 6:30 p.m. in "Quaking Dover: The History of Quakers in Dover" presented by Jnana Hodson, author of "Quaking Dover: How a Counterculture Took Root and Flourished in Colonial New Hampshire." The presentation will be in-person with the option to view it remotely from home. Those who wish to watch online will need to sign up at the library's website to receive a link to the virtual presentation. Copies of Hodson's book will also be available for purchase and signing.

During Dover's first two centuries, the Quakers were the only organized alternative to the town's tax-funded church, now known as First Parish. Hodson's presentation gives a lively look at early Dover from the point of view of its largest minority and members of its second-oldest congregation.

Hodson was an active member of the Friends Meetinghouse in Dover, a historic Quaker meetinghouse, for three decades. The faith runs in the family as many Hodson/Hodgson/Hodgin ancestors were also Quakers. He is a retired daily newspaper editor with eight published novels to his credit, and his blog Jnana's Red Barn has more than 5,000 followers. He's recently downsized to a remote fishing village with a lively arts scene in Way Downeast Maine.

This program is free and open to the public. For more information or to sign up to watch virtually, visit the library's website at library.dover.nh.gov or call 603-516-6050.

Children's Museum of New Hampshire to host grown-up fundraiser, 'Cider Flights and Tasty Bites'

The Children's Museum of New Hampshire is pleased to offer a unique, grown-up-only, fundraising event this spring. Tickets are on sale now for "Cider Flights & Tasty Bites" happening Saturday, March 25 from 7-9 p.m. (6:30 p.m. entry for VIP ticket holders) which is a special collaboration with North Country Hard Cider Company. The event, hosted at the Children's Museum amongst its two floors of hands-on, interactive exhibits, will feature tasty four-ounce locally crafted cider pours from North Country Hard Cider paired with tasty bites from local restaurants. A portion of each ticket sold will benefit The Children's Museum of New Hampshire's exhibits and programs.

North Country Hard Cider Company was founded by Silas Gordon, Ivan Gordon, and Ron Dixon when they teamed up to create additive and preservative-free cider, sourced from local orchards, whose agricultural methods they trust. They press and blend a wide variety of antique and heirloom apples, as well as other well-known types. They have planted over 500 trees on their own family farm, and have used the apples from this experimental orchard in some of their ciders. The cidery, previously located in Rollinsford, moved to a new location at 38 Littleworth Road in Dover in 2022.

"We're excited to collaborate again with The Children's Museum of New Hampshire for this fundraiser," said Silas Gordon. "We love our new location in Dover and look forward to introducing more people to our products at this event, all while supporting a great cause." The Children's Museum is also partnering with local restaurants and food purveyors to offer tasty bites for this fundraiser. Current participants include Dos Mexican Eats, Ohana Kitchen, Aviation Kitchen and Brewing, and Cabot Creamery.

"Our mission here at the Children's Museum of New Hampshire is to actively engage families in hands-on discovery, and it's wonderful that we can bring the same sentiment into our fundraising events," said CMNH President Jane Bard. "It's a good reminder that we don't stop discovering new things just because we have reached adulthood."

This will be the second year that CMNH and North Country Hard Cider will have collaborated on this event, the first of which was in 2019.

"The first time we put together this fundraiser, we sold out tickets pretty quickly," Bard said. "It was a really successful and fun way to gather our community together." Other 21-plus events being offered by the museum this year include the return of last summer's successful "Concerts from the Patio" series, where grown-ups (21-plus) can enjoy the Cochecho Arts Festival summer concerts from the museum's Play Patio. Highlights of these events include a cash bar on the Patio and access to the Museum's restrooms. Dates for concerts will be announced closer to the summer season.

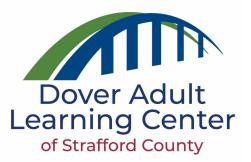

Tickets for Cider Flights and Tasty Bites are on sale now and are limited to 200 general admission tickets and 50 VIP tickets. Advance online tickets are $35 per person and available until March 25 at 12 p.m. or $40 at the door if the event is not sold out. Designated driver tickets are also available for $25 in advance and $35 at the door and include non-alcoholic beverages and food tastings. Each general admission ticket purchase includes five four-ounce tastes of cider. Special VIP tickets are available for $50 ($35 designated driver) and feature early entry to the event at 6:30 p.m. as well as an extra four-ounce pour of cider, totaling six pours.

Use caution on the ice as spring approaches

With fluctuating and unpredictable temperatures commonplace throughout the month of March in the Granite State, New Hampshire Fish and Game Department officials urge outdoor enthusiasts to exercise extreme caution when enjoying late-winter activities on or near the ice. Ice anglers are also advised to plan ahead for bob house removal; all bob houses must be removed from water bodies and private property by April 1, 2023.

"Caution is in order for those going out onto any ice, especially following this winter's changeable weather," said NH Fish and Game Colonel Kevin Jordan. "With erratic temperatures, some areas of ice may look safe, but may not be. We are urging people to check the ice thickness before going out onto any frozen waterbody."

"Because of changeable ice conditions, it is never advisable to drive vehicles onto the ice," Jordan said. Those on foot should carefully assess ice safety before venturing out by using an ice chisel or auger to determine ice thickness and condition. Continue to do this as you get further out onto the ice because the thickness of the ice will not be uniform over the entire water body. Snow-covered ice can be deceiving and should always be inspected carefully. Though all ice is potentially dangerous, the U.S. Army Cold Regions Research & Engineering Laboratory in Hanover, NH, offers this advice on ice thickness: There should be a minimum of 6 inches of hard ice before individual foot travel, and 8–10 inches of hard ice for snow machine or Off-Highway Recreational Vehicle travel.

Keep in mind that thick ice does not always mean safe ice. It is possible for ice to be thick, but not strong, because of varying weather conditions. Weak ice forms when warming trends break down the ice, then the surface refreezes. Be especially careful of areas with current, such as inlets, outlets, and spring holes, where the ice can be dangerously thin.

Tips for staying safe on the ice include:

- It is never advisable to drive vehicles onto the ice.
- Don't venture onto any ice during thaws.
- Stay off the ice along the shoreline if it is cracked or squishy. Docks, rocks, and downed trees absorb the sun's heat and can cause the ice around them to be thin.
- Watch out for thin, clear, or honeycombed ice. Dark and/or off-colored ice may also indicate weak spots.
- Small bodies of water tend to freeze thicker. Rivers and lakes are more prone to wind, currents, and wave action that weaken ice.
- Never gather in large groups on less than 8–10 inches of hard ice.
- Always bring along a rescue rope, ice picks, and a personal flotation device such as a float coat or life preserver.
- If you do break through the ice, stay calm. Move or swim back to where you fell in, where you know the ice was solid. Lay both arms on the unbroken ice and kick hard. This will help lift your body onto the ice. A set of ice picks can help you pull yourself out; wear them around your neck or put them in an easily accessible pocket. Once out of the water, roll away from the hole until you reach solid ice.
- If someone you are with breaks through the ice, don't rush over to the hole—keep yourself safe. Look for something to throw or to use to reach out to the person such as a rope, tree branch, or ice spud. Lie down flat and reach out with your tool. After securing the person, do not stand—wiggle backward on the solid ice pulling the person with you.

Ice safety is also very important for snowmobilers. Don't assume a trail is safe just because it exists; check out trail conditions before you go
